SOUTH BAY CITIZEN OF THE MONTH

Eugene E. Meyer Jr. is a Redondo Beach fireman, but his hobby is building bridges — bridges between teen-agers and civic officialdom. The South Bay Youth Council, which he founded, is a group of high school boys and girls who, with the help of Meyer and other interested adults, are meeting with public officials to learn how to be active participants in creative democracy. "This is the alternative to protest," Meyer explains. "Today's youngsters are wonderful kids; they want to be involved in the adult world and to contribute to it, but they need help in making contact." Through the Youth Council, teen-agers can discover how to contribute to social progress within due process of law.
